“ I first met Arizona when my brother introduced her to me, my sister, and mom! This was back in 2010. She went to school with my brother, on Christmas she brought us gifts! It was a good smelling body wash and gel brown sugar and vanilla! Well I didn't know her all that well, all I know is that she came to my house last year she was friends with the people that were staying with me and she never showed any attitude towards me in my house she would ask me to pick her up or bring her over. Then we had a small little disagreement but to be honest even tho we stopped liking each other due to a petty situation she always waved when she saw me driving passed or walking. I never understood that! We went to the Septemberfest together and got on the gravitron together, that was the only time we actually had spent time together one on one! We talked out our problem that night and went our own way! If I could turn back time I would have apologized to her personally for letting something so petty get in the way! She was always on live and when I would hop on she would always yell HEY JO-JO! I am not saying that we were buddy buddy and that I knew her forever cuz I didn't and we weren't! We just had this unexplainable something. She would randomly Facebook call me and ask me to give her a ride or something! Anyone who truly knows me will tell you I never really turned down helping someone out! So if I could and I was available I would give her that ride! It is shocking to know that you will not be among us Arizona. I will never just see you coming out of Circle K again or hear you scream Hey Jo-Jo! I just know that even to the people like me who only seen you once in a blue moon you have touched! Rest easy beautiful!
