“ Mom was an amazing person, growing up during the depression, she learned the value of family and being a caretaker. We grew up with everything we ate was made from scratch:ie..mayonnaise, jams, jellies, candies, pies, cakes,pastries, bread, soups, rootbeer, ice cream....probably more things than I can remember. Quite different than today. We walked to school back then and road our bikes to go most places. Mom ran the house and dad worked. Every one had chores and individual responsibilities. If you wanted something you had to work for it....you didn't get something for nothing. Even though there were rules, you never felt trapped or restricted. There were times for meals and you had better be on time. Didn't like the meal, go hungry, no substitutions. Dinner at 5pm when dad got home, don't be late. This is a time I cherish as today there doesn't appear to be any respect for one's parents or the public in general. We had sibling conflicts, but I can't remember one that mattered. We weren't rich but we never wanted. We took family trips together, vacations at the Jersey Shore and excursions to see the relatives, and summer camps. Mom ran the show and what a show it's been. It has run for many years and with all the bumps and bruises, wrong turns and flat tires, squabbles and disagreements, new lives and careers, t he one thing that was always consistant was coming home to see and be with Mom, just to visit or spend the Holidays with..... Damn....She will be missed.....Love ya Mom
