“Dad, it's been two months without you. It's so surreal, I miss you more than anything. This world feels so empty without your presence; I hope wherever you are is peaceful. I hope I see you again one day, you were my person and my everything. I miss you dad, you fought so hard and I'm glad for the 16 years we spent together. I'm proud of you, and I'll keep making you proud.

“ I will spend the rest of my life missing Mike. I'm not sure if he ever fully realized what a treasure he was in my life, or what a shining star he was in the eyes of our daughter, but I hope he knew.

He was the best father in the world to Alex. Even as he suffered, he would try to practice softball with her in the backyard, and she thrived under his care. He was an amazing parent. I could go on and on about all of the wonderful things he did for her, but it would fill an entire book. In fact, Mike had an amazing sense of humor and was always joking around with Alex. She kept notes of all the funny things he would say, and when I would see her, she would read them to me, and it would make my day. He was the funniest person in the world.

He was everything to her. And she was the apple of his eye.

No matter what I say right now, it could never truly capture the depth of who he was to me personally. I could sing his praises a million different ways, on a million different days. But what I want most for people to know is this: I'm so incredibly thankful that I had him in my life. He was the best father in the world, and I chose the right man to share a child with. I loved the total sum of who he was, and this is the hardest loss I've ever been dealt.

So, here's the first selfie Mike ever took, LOL. It was the first time I ever saw his face and I remember thinking how handsome he was. I loved him, and I was blessed to call him a friend in the end.

I'll miss his face, his humor, and I'll miss his music. He could play a guitar like no other and he never bragged on it, but I can. So, here's a video of him playing one of my favorite songs.

Rest in peace Mike. God has you in heaven, but we have you in our hearts.
