“ For all who miss Shane not knowing what to say, feelings like waves at the ocean sad, then a happy memory in between then a sad wave followed by some calm i can see it in tom too though just hanging onto the fun memories of shane him working amd the funny moments in between at work when the camaraderie and maybe a little boistrousness (the wheel brush in the bucket competition) allowed us a small repose from the monotony of the day and inspired us to go forth thats what im talkin' about the small lighthearted moments so we ride the waves relish the calm in between knowing that others feel the same provides a measure of comfort i was inspired by this if it helps

*How often do you fear the road up ahead
How often do you dread the unknown
How often too, do you tend to forget that you never walk alone*

*For there's One who well knows where you're going,
He's sure every step of the way,
For long, long ago He walked the same path
That you and i travel today*

*And he understands every misgiving
For fear is a part of us all
But in faith make each step firm and steady,
And the father will not let you fall*

*Just remember He's walking beside you
With love that will never fail
His arm around your shoulders,
His eye upon the trail (lee simmons)
